As of August 2005, National Incident Management System (NIMS) training is mandated for Harris County employees who serve as part of disaster response, but it is recommended for all county employees.

As Harris County employees, you may one day be called on to support disaster response or recovery efforts. With many county departments currently telecommuting, now may be an excellent time to learn a little more how the county runs our emergency operations.

FEMA offers these four courses through their online training program. Once complete, you will receive a certificate via email to keep for your records and to submit as part of your department's annual NIMS report survey. Please visit the below link to access each of these courses.
